The grounds of Parkland Secondary were choc-a-bloc with enthusiastic students Thursday, as hundreds of young runners burst from the starting blocks to participate in SD63's annual Elementary School Track Meet.

Saanich trustees reject contract offer

By Lee Torgelson
Peninsula News Review

Minister of Education Paul Ramsey says that SD63 trustees have just turned down a $150 million offer.

"Obviously, I'm disappointed," Ramsey told The Review Tuesday after hearing SD63 unanimously rejected the latest contract offer by the provincial government and B.C. Teachers' Federation.

"Let's make this very clear. What they are saying 'no' to is 1,200 new teachers across the province, reduction in class size for Kindergarten to Grade 3 classes and 500 teacher-librarians and ESL teachers," Ramsey said, adding trustees around the province are voting against the deal not because of what it contains, but because they were left out of contract talks.

"That's my take on it," he said.

Derek Chow, SD63 board chair, announced the decision at the regular board meeting Monday night.

Reading from a prepared statement, Chow said that despite what people may have heard, the agreement could cause students and families to suffer "serious dislocation in their school programs."

"The agreement removes any flexibility the board has to deploy its teaching resources in the most effective manner to meet the needs of the Saanich students," he said.

Under terms of the agreement, students could be forced out of neighborhood schools to meet rigid class size provisions and, despite funding for new teachers, other parts of the agreement could force the district into a deficit of up to $700,000 and impose drastic cuts in other areas, Chow added.

In an interview last week, Ken Babcock, President of the Saanich Teachers' Association, expressed hope trustees would vote in favor of the agreement.

"Any agreement that puts money right back into the classroom has to be good," he said.

But Babcock's hopes were dashed in the wake of Monday's announcement.

"I was hoping against hope that (trustees) would follow the lead set by the Victoria district. Obviously, that's not to be and I'm extremely disappointed."

Neighbors and teens seek solutions to skatepark problems

By Judy Reincho
Peninsula News Review

Tempers flared at times, but there was some movement toward solutions at a meeting that brought youth, organizers and neighbors together to talk about Sidney's new skateboard park.

About 15 residents from the area near the skateboard park being built next to Sanscha Hall crowded into a meeting on Wednesday, June 10 at town hall.

Their major concerns were traffic, safety of children and other residents, and the noise generated by the skateboarders. Of those, traffic took top billing.

"It's getting to be a racetrack around our neighborhood," said one resident whose front window has been broken by rocks flung from spinning tires. "They're racing around the field, ripping up the grass, and speeding along the streets."

"There are 11 children living in the four houses near the stop sign," added another resident. "Does a child need to get hit by a car before something is done?"

The neighbors agreed, however, that the speeding cars were likely not being driven by the kids using the park for skateboarding. The consensus was that such a facility tends to bring out the young people who will abuse the situation by speeding, drinking, doing drugs and using bad language.

Near drowning at Port Sidney

A four-year-old boy was plucked from the chilly waters of Port Sidney Marina and taken to Saanich Peninsula Hospital Monday night after falling off a dock.

Commissionaire Mel Desroches quickly came to the boy's aid after hearing calls for help from the boy's five-year-old brother.

The two boys were being baby-sat aboard a 40-foot boat moored at 'E' dock when the child ventured outside in his pajamas and slipped into the water. The babysitter jumped in after him, but was unable to pull him to safety.

According to witness John Vye, who called an ambulance to the scene, Desroches pulled the child from the drink and began mouth-to-mouth resuscitation.

"He came up blue and not breathing," Vye told The Review Tuesday.

"Mel had already taken care of things by the time I got there, and the boy was breathing," Vye said.

According to Sidney-North Saanich RCMP, the boy was examined at SPH and released to his parents.

Crause enters not-guilty plea

A 41-year-old Sidney man accused of bilking a dozen investors of more than half a million dollars appeared in Victoria provincial court Friday.

Former Sidney financial advisor Kenneth Ivan Crause has entered a not guilty plea to a number of theft-related charges.

Several elderly witnesses testified at his preliminary hearing on Friday and Monday. The court will determine if there is enough evidence to proceed to trial in B.C. Supreme Court.

There is a ban on publication of the evidence.

Bevan Pier proponents fishing for expansion

By Judy Reimche

Peninsula News Review

Pier Committee co-chair Reg Teeney said an application sent to the Ministry of Environment, Lands and Parks to allow for an extension to the existing Bevan Street pier is simply a fishing expedition.

The Town of Sidney has sent an application for a water lot lease to the Ministry of Environment, Lands and Parks asking for a 300-foot extension to the pier. The proposed addition would turn back toward Beacon Avenue, and would include some form of commercial services on the pier.

Sidney councillor Peter Wainwright said the application went in "although there is no firm application in front of council. The Committee doing the fund-raising for the pier came to council asking that the proposal be changed. We raised some concerns, but didn't veto the idea."

Wainwright said he personally didn't like the new plan, but joined council's decision to allow the committee to pursue the changes. The water lease application was paid for by the town.

"The town can refuse the lease at any time. It's an application that refers to an area. It doesn't hold us to a design," he said. "There's no real commitment there."

Reasons for withdrawing the application, or not allowing the changes, would be based on what council hears from the residents, he said.

However, at Sidney council's meeting Monday night, Coun. Jack Barker, who originally supported the idea, has since found out some key players, like the owners of the Sidney Hotel, had not been approached before the committee brought the new concept to council.

Mayor Don Amos said the town will continue to pursue the wa-

PUBLIC INPUT SETS PRIORITY

Sidney Council will pursue the water lot lease, but not the plan to link the Bevan Pier to Beacon Avenue wharf.

ter lease "as it is good for the town, but we're not pursuing the pier idea."

Bill Hubbard, Environment Ministry official in Nanaimo who will be processing the application, said: "Any decision by our office is at least a year away. We have the usual innumerable hoops to go through yet."

The Ministries of Fisheries and Environment, among other concerned agencies, will look at the proposal, and then it must go through a broad public process, which will be advertised, Hubbard said.

"When we're making a decision about Crown lands, we have to be sure we've looked at all possibilities."

"It's just a suggestion, that we join the pier up to Beacon Wharf," Teeney said. "Right now, our plan is to add 120 feet straight out — we have all the approvals from the various ministries for that."

He said the only commercial ventures he foresees on the pier are a concession stand, a place to rent or buy tackle, and public washrooms.

Ferry's future topic of open house

■ BC Ferries to begin public discussions on Brentwood-Mill Bay run

By Lee Torgelson

Peninsula News Review

If you care anything at all about the Mill Bay-Brentwood Bay ferry line, now is your chance to let officials know.

The BC Ferry Corporation is holding the first in a series of local open houses on Wednesday, June 24 to gather input on the questionable future of the service.

Central Saanich Councillor Allison Habkirk is urging everyone to "at least pass through," the open house.

"It's very important for the people of Central Saanich to be there and for council to have as good a representation as possible," she said at council's June 1 meeting.

Habkirk added she was concerned with the lack of information given out in a press release from the corporation.

"It all sounds very informal and that is a concern. It's downplaying the importance of these open houses," Habkirk said.

Council supported a motion from Habkirk to invite the Capital Regional District and local business associations to take a more assertive role in requesting public participation in the open houses.

Area residents are worried that BC Ferries is planning to pull the plug on the ferry given its advancing age (42 years), the extensive work needed on the Brentwood Bay dock and because the ferry run is under-utilized.

But Ferries officials say residents are making much ado about nothing.

"That's the purposes of these open houses; to gauge public support and to see if we can come up with some viable solutions to this problem," said Clay Suddaby, BC Ferries communications manager.

Suddaby added the open houses would be held in a series, both in Brentwood Bay and at the other end of the run in Mill Bay over the next year to ensure everyone has had the opportunity to attend.

"We're not looking to wrap this matter up until the late summer of next year, so we won't be excluding anyone that may be away in the coming summer months," he said.

In a recent media advisory, Glen Brown, executive vice president of the corporation's Inter-Island services, said it's no secret that BC Ferries is facing substantial challenges on the route.

"The ship is more than 40 years old, and the terminal infrastructure at both ends of the route will require considerable investment in the near future. These costs, which the route does not currently bear, will change the economics of this operation and we need the creative ideas of our customers and others to ensure the long-term sustainability of the route," he said.

Responding to earlier comments from Habkirk that the ferry was under-advertised and under-utilized, Suddaby said that "(As for) selling this as a tourist route, we'd love to look at stuff like that."

The first open house is set for June 24 in the Poplar Room at the North and South Saanich Agricultural Hall from 2 to 9 p.m.

Ferry shortage weakens link to sister cities

By Judy Reimche

Peninsula News Review

The ferry capacity for the Anacortes run is being cut by 33 per cent this year. That means 60 cars per day fewer will be able to travel between Sidney and Anacortes, Washington.

The Ferry Advisory Committee is concerned about any type of reduction to service, and will hold a meeting on June 26 to discuss this and other issues. The group began two years ago when the ferry service was threatened with cancellation. At that time, they were given three years to increase the viability of the run.

Since that time the committee has met every second month to deal with issues surrounding the ferry and its affects on the towns on both sides of the border.

"There has been on-going reduction in service, but this is substantially less (service) this year than ever before," said Anacortes Ferry agent Ron Olson.

He said the cuts come mainly because of a shortage of ferries. "Washington State experienced more traffic growth than planned, and there simply isn't the equipment to handle it," Olson said. "There are some new ferries running, and some under construction. But I don't see any relief for at least a couple of years."

On top of that, he said there has been "a tremendous no-show problem with the reservation system." Washington State ferries hopes to eliminate that by its new pre-deposit reservation system. As of June 21, it will cost $30 to reserve a space, the fee being deducted from the total fare upon boarding. There has also been a substantial reduction in fee offered for the off-season.

However, Olson said that wasn't done soon enough to stop the elimination of the round trip service that the ferry has provided for the past 35 years.

But he remains optimistic about the ferry's future.

"The Town of Sidney is negotiating with the federal government to take over the terminal. That will help attract a private operator," Olson said. Turning the service over to a private operator is seen as one solution to keeping the ferry in service.

The Ferry Advisory Committee will meet at 3 p.m., Friday, June 26 at the Sidney Museum.

Councillor hears symphony's call

Sidney Councillor Jack Barker wants to add some culture to the town. He put a proposal to to council at its June 10 meeting that could bring the Victoria Symphony here for a summer concert.

July 4 was the date Barker suggested, and the place he has in mind is on a barge in front of the Hotel Sidney.

"That weekend there are a lot of American boats here," he said. "I foresee an outdoor symphony concert, followed by a good fireworks display."

Council approved the idea in principle, but with the provision that there be no cost to the town, as a price tag of $30,000 to bring the orchestra here was attached to the proposal.

Barker said there was no intention of asking the town for any of the funding. He added that the estimate of $30,000 was likely higher than actual costs might be. He said those costs included the assembly of lights and sound system for the concert, but that that equipment would be available for the town's use previous to the concert night.

With council's approval, Barker will take the idea to the Peninsula Celebrations Society and Sidney and North Saanich Arts Council for further planning. He will follow that up with a report back to council on the costs and impacts of having the concert here.

Hearing Tests Set For Senior Citizens

Sidney - FREE

Electronic hearing tests will be given at the Beltone Better Hearing Centre office on Wednesday, June 17, Thursday, June 18, and Friday, June 19. A registered audiologist will perform the tests.

Anyone who has trouble hearing is welcome to have a test using modern electronic equipment to determine if the loss is one which may be helped. Some of the causes of hearing loss will be explained and diagrams of how the ear works will be shown.

Everyone over age 55 should have a hearing test at least once a year — even people now wearing a hearing aid or those who have been told nothing could be done for them. Only a hearing test can determine if you are one of the many a hearing aid can help. The hearing tests will be given this Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, 9 am - 4:30 pm. To avoid waiting, call for an appointment.

Kindergarten and nursery school students of Lau Weine Tribal School in Brentwood Bay were decked out in their cardboard mortarboards and colorful robes Thursday for the school's annual graduation ceremonies. A large number of parents of the First Nations' students packed the school's gymnasium for the event, which saw about 50 pupils attend the convocation ceremonies.

Skateboard committee to meet tonight

"Then there's the constant clacking of the skateboards. It sounds like it's in my front room," said one woman. "I don't know how long I can put up with that."

Several youth, members of the skateboard park committee, YEES and the Sidney Wheels Athletic Team (SWAT) were at the meeting. One young man expressed his frustration with the problems. "Skaters were getting frustrated at getting their boards confiscated because they were skating down Beacon. And a lot of the older people were concerned about their safety because of the skaters on the street. We thought [building the park] would solve that," he said.

Other committee members said they would be on the scene appealing to the wrong-doers. They suggested working alongside police to try to deter the destructive behavior.

One neighbor, calling the park "a great gift [for the kids] that they must take care of," said peer pressure could work to keep those who are not the real troublemakers on the right path, leaving police to look after "the fringe group."

Parks Manager Jonathan Kelly said there are concrete blocks being installed along the street near the skateboard park to deter traffic, and the stop sign has been moved to make it more visible. But they agreed with neighbors that those tactics were nowhere near enough; the purpose of calling everyone together was to find out what the neighbors want.

Both sides agreed that finding a solution did not mean they simply moved the problem to another neighborhood.

other neighborhood.

Toward the end of the meeting, SWAT member Sean Glickman reminded some of the people at the meeting that he had already put out a means to find solutions earlier in the process, and he reiterated it for all in attendance.

"We should select representatives from all the groups affected, plus people from the neighborhood and put everyone under one umbrella group. Then we can work on solutions," he said.

Concerns about use of the gravel road leading to the park (beside Dairy Queen) could be solved by putting in diagonal parking and paving the road, he said.

Coun. Tim Chad, who attended the meeting, said Sidney council will work immediately on some ways to slow down traffic. They will develop a noise barrier of trees and shrubbery between the park and the nearby homes.

"I like the idea of setting up a committee with the residents," Glickman said Saturday. "I'm looking forward to working with them, and putting smiles on their faces. I really believe this can be solved."

"This is a great park. We can put on events, by ourselves or as youth events, to go along with ones put on by the Memorial Park Society. Given the right mission, this could help bring skaters and their parents to Sidney. And it could help bridge the gap between youth and seniors in this town."

To move forward with the ideas generated at the first meeting, another meeting will be held at the Town Hall tonight (June 17) at 7 p.m.

Trustees say agreement restricts boards

Under terms of the agreement, teachers' salaries would remain the same in the first year and first nine months of the second year then increase two per cent April 1, 2000; $75 million would be spent over the next three years exclusively for hiring 500 additional teachers, teacher librarians, counsellors, learning assistance, ESL and special education teachers; lower provincial maximum class sizes for Kindergarten to Grade 3 and an additional $75 million would be invested to hire 700 additional teachers to reduce K-3 class sizes in the next three years; and salary and benefit improvements for adult educators and teachers on-call.

Babcock contends the real issue for trustees is that the $150 million being pumped into provincial education coffers isn't going toward administrative costs.

"In spite of the trustees' contention that the agreement removes flexibility, it doesn't," he said. "The problem here is that distribution of that funding has not been left to the discretion of the boards. Rather, the government has said 'here's the funds, and here's what it's for.'"

As for the issues of students being forced out of neighborhood schools to comply with "rigid class size provisions," Babcock said it was a "red herring."

"The only place that the agreement restricts that is in the K-3 level — two years from now — and that's because they're saying there's not enough resources at this level, which is where the funding comes in," he said.

As for Chow's contention that other parts of the agreement could force the district into a deficit or drastic cuts, Babcock disagreed.

"I would like to know what other part of the agreement trustees think might do that. I am familiar with the agreement in detail and I don't know what other section they could be referring to," he said.

But trustees stand by their decision, saying the deal only looks good on paper.

"The agreement does not address employee objectives and it restricts how to best organize our schools to meet the needs of students," said trustee Donna Bate.

But the bottom line, said Babcock, is that trustees, teachers and parents have always complained of under-funding in the education system and now that it's there, trustees can't spend it the way they want.

"Nobody expected the government to say not only here's funding, but here's even more funding, but this is where it goes. Therein lies the problem," he said.

To date, Victoria School District trustees are one of only three in the province that have voted in favor of the agreement.

Approximately 20 others have voted against it. "We will have to wait and see what happens after trustees release province-wide results on Thursday (June 18)," said Ramsay.

FLYING HIGH

Victoria Airshow '98 fast approaching

By Judy Reimche

Peninsula News Review

Eighteen lucky kids buckled themselves in and took to the air on Saturday. They got free rides on six small aircraft as part of the kick-off for Airshow '98. Each is involved in Rotary programs, Cubs, Scouts, YEES or Young Eagles.

Pilots volunteered their time to show the youngsters how to check all sections of the plane for safety before boarding, and how to be safe during their flight. Headphones in place, each of the kids was able to get a step-by-step pilot's-eye view of flying the planes.

The kick-off was presaged by Sidney Town Crier Bert Stevens announcing the Airshow, followed by Rotarian Barry Hobbs addressing the crowd that included representatives from 10 Greater Victoria Rotary Clubs and sponsors: Thrifty Foods, Coca-Cola, News Group, CHEK TV, Kraft Foods, C-FAX 1070 AM Radio, Shell Canada, Save-On Gas, Horizon Net, Investors Group, Pacific Coast Savings Credit Union and The Times Colonist.

Airshow '98 will be held July 19, and is expected to attract between 30,000 and 40,000 spectators.

Taking to the air will be Bud Granley (Yak 55 - aerobatics and SNJ - aerobatics), Canadian Forces parachute Team Sky Hawks, Canadian Forces air demonstration team Snowbirds, Bill Carter (Pitts Special aerobatics), Manfred Radius (glider aerobatics), Canadian Forces (CF 19 fighter demonstration and others) and the U.S. Military A10 fighter demonstration and Stealth Fighter fly-by.

For those with their feet firmly on the ground, there will be a large number of ground displays, entertainers, food, souvenirs, music and more activities to complement the action in the skies.

Airshow '98 takes place at the Victoria International Airport, with the gates opening at 8:30 a.m. The Static Ramp opens at 9 a.m. Flying events will continue throughout the day, ending around 3:15 p.m. Gates close at 5:30 p.m.

The air show will be a biannual event, with the next one to take place in 2000.

Tickets for this year's show are $10 for adults, $8 for seniors, $3 per child and $25 per family for the Early Birds, now to July 18. Gate prices go up by $2 per person, except for the family rate, which remains at $25.

Group rates, for vehicles with 15 or more people, are $2.50 per person. Group rate and ticket inquiries may be made at 383-6181.

Tickets are now on sale at Save-On Gas and Pacific Coast Savings.

Noise friendly flights this summer

The Victoria Airport Authority is issuing a friendly reminder of extended flight activity during the summer months.

Each year, local cadets use this time to complete their training. All flights will take place in the small hours of the morning.

Laurie Brown, general manager of VAA, said all flights will be with "noise friendly" aircraft such as the Air BC dash 8 and BAE 146.

Emergency Response Services have been requested by the airline and will be provided by the VAA on a cost recovery basis, Brown said.

As well, operations will be conducted on the main runway, taking the planes over the water rather than the community to lower noise impact.

Flights are scheduled for July 4 (3:25, 4:50, 11:30 and 11:50 p.m.), July 18 (7:55 and 8:20 p.m.), July 19 (4:55 a.m. and 5:20 a.m.), July 25 (3:30 and 3:55 p.m., 1:25 and 1:50 a.m.), August 1 (5:30, 5:55, 7 and 7:25 a.m.), and August 15 (12:55, 1:30, 2:45, 3:10, 4:25, 4:55 and 5:15 a.m.).

YEES looks to councils for its financial future

Say YES to YEES. That's the message the people behind the scenes at Youth Establishing Entertainment Endeavors in Sidney and North Saanich hope area politicians will hear come fall, when the struggling youth group plans to make its pitch to be part of the municipal budget mix.

About 25 people, from youth and educators to police and politicians, gathered inside the tight confines of the YEES youth centre last Wednesday to hear of the group's constant financial worries.

Though municipal funding in the form of annual grants from Sidney and North Saanich ($17,000 this year) helps the group plan some of its programs, those monies only represent about 24 per cent of YEES's annual operating budget of nearly $70,000.

Making up the rest of that budget are federal and provincial grants (about $12,000 each), donations from non-profit groups such as Rotary and private business and roughly $25,000 raised each year from the group's charity casino nights and youth-initiated fund-raisers.

But it's still far from enough.

Right now, YEES only has enough cash in the kitty to carry its operations through to September.

And, as in past years, it's wait-and-see from then on.

YEES proponents, such as Sidney Councillor Jack Barker, say the group's long-term problem is the lack of a base budget that the organization can rely on.

"I would like to see the community stand up and support a base budget that will keep this centre open," Barker told the meeting. "Somehow, our community has to funnel a contribution to youth in the budget and tax rates. The majority of seniors in town would say 'yes' to that, I think.

North Saanich Coun. Ron Townshend agreed, saying there needs to be more collaboration between Peninsula organizations when it comes to funding youth programs.

"It's important to get the councils together and get them to stop thinking about their own little fiefdoms, but at the Peninsula as a whole," offered Townshend.

Point taken, Ron.

In the end, YEES agreed to strike a committee that will draft a funding proposal to take to municipal councils and the Peninsula Recreation Commission in the fall.

It's a solid start in developing a long-term focus for a group that has done much for local youth.

But YEES can't sustain its success on a shoestring budget.

Pros and cons of Vander Zalm's return

It's official. Vander Zalm is back, reportedly as handsome as ever, and leading a political party again.

Fifty-three votes cast for the one-time premier, thirty-eight against, is what it took to make him Reform BC president.

That's quite a contrast with the 1986 Social Credit leadership convention in Whistler, a triumph of baroque excess which saw millions of dollars spent in vain as Vander Zalm proved victorious on a fourth ballot vote of more than 1,000 delegates.

But some things never change: then as now Vander Zalm won without much apparent organization, relying instead on his charisma.

It's perhaps timely to recall where Vander Zalm's penchant for running things by the seat of his pants got him the last time he was put in charge of things.

Most of the cabinet he'd inherited from Bill Bennett retired in disgust in a few months.

Those who stayed on after the 1986 Socred election victory, Brian Smith and Grace McCarthy, quit within two years in protest.

Guided then only by God and by gut, he pushed unpopular causes such as pro life, adopted unsound fly-by-night policies like dividing the province into regions, each with its own minister, and finally and fatally, used his office to promote the sale of his Fantasy Gardens theme park.

He took over a party heavy with talent, (if bereft of vision), the best and the brightest of backroom organizers, pollsters, analysts - and left it a gutted hulk.

Now he has taken over a party that is full of commitment to direct democracy, fiscal responsibility, law and order and "family values" (code for opposition to any expansion of homosexual rights).

In fact, it is far more committed than Vander Zalm is.

The Prince George convention elected him president, not leader. A convenient change to the constitution means that no leader need be chosen to replace the ousted Wilf Hanni.

The bonus for Vander Zalm is that he hasn't undertaken the responsibility of leadership: he can back out if things go poorly.

And they might.

His party has a $100,000 debt and no corporate backers. It has no experts at organizing, campaigning or media handling. It has trouble running a meeting.

It's only asset is the potential to command a quarter of the vote, that being the share of popular support it draws between elections.

But even that is questionable, as in its only electoral contest in 1996 it drew nine per cent, as most Reform backers must have abandoned their convictions, held their noses and voted for the Liberals as the only hope of stopping the NDP.

Vander Zalm's charisma might keep more Reform supporters onside during the election. And with 25 per cent of the vote the Reformers could take six or seven seats.

If the NDP got its usual 40-per-cent share, a Reform impact of this size would keep the NDP in for a third straight term.

But if the vote followed current polling results, with the Liberals far ahead of both the NDP and the Reformers, six or seven Reform MLAs might hold the balance of power with a minority Liberal government in office.

Will the initial popularity boost which Vander Zalm's arrival may give the Reformers wane after a half year? Will he stick around?

Stay tuned.

Memoirs of a world away

Things seldom happen as you imagined. Travelling to the Vancouver International Airport, first by ferry and next through frustrating traffic tie-ups, I really wanted to get to the terminal in lots of time for my daughter's homecoming. I had it all planned. It had been, after all, more than a year since I had seen her.

I did get there in lots of time. But the plane was more than half an hour early, so as I looked on the arrival schedule, I was embraced from behind, and a very familiar voice excitedly babbled some very unfamiliar French phrases in my ear.

All my planning couldn't have laid out a better reunion.

Janis is 21, and left home (and university) two years ago to travel and learn about the world. Europe was the world she wanted to learn about, and there is little of it that she missed. Originally, she planned on just one year, but, working in England and travelling from Scotland to North Africa, she found that simply wasn't enough time. So she stayed.

If her visa hadn't expired, she would still be there.

She is taller, thinner and more mature than when she left. Thankfully, she is still the same girl inside. But she has some adjustments to make now that she's home. Like getting into the car from the right side. Or the left, if she's driving. Her first time behind the wheel was exciting for her (and more so for me, as the passenger). "Is the light turning red after the yellow, or green?" she asked me nonchalantly. In England, it could be either — here, she'd better be ready to put on the brakes.

Her ear is slightly offended by our raw-sounding accents after the softer lilt and more colorful expressions of the British. Janis, oddly enough, picked up none of the accent, aside from the lifting of the ends of her sentences.

If the voices are a little harsh on her ears, Canadian food (whatever that means) isn't. Working at four and five-star hotels and posh restaurants in England, she had a good introduction to fine dining. However, as a staff member, she got good old English food, mostly meat and chips. Not so great if you, like Janis, are vegetarian.

"Vegetarian food is nearly completely unknown to them," she said, looking through the fridge for chick peas and mushrooms.

She's starving for salads. And good natchos — hey, she's still a kid.

What she's learned about the world is not so tangible, but very evident in her new self-assurance.

We'll enjoy it while we can. The day after getting home, she was already on the phone to the French Embassy — to find out about going to school in France. She wants to become more fluent in the language she has begun to speak and understand very well. ("I had to go to England to learn French. Go figure.")

Also, you see, there is this young Frenchman she met ...

BEEFS and BOUQUETS

A big bouquet to Kevin and his wife for their help when our car broke down Thursday evening. It's good to know there are such helpful people in our city.

Beefs to the person or persons who stole my beautiful "sunshine" flag from the front of my store. You'll never hang it in this town.

Corsages and boutonnieres to the Dry Grad students and their guests for a wonderful, safe night.

These Bouquets and Beefs are "borrowed" from the Parksville-Qualicum Beach News, a News Group partner that has been running this column very successfully for about three years.

Residents and the business community there have found the column a worthwhile addition to the newspaper, and a way to express their thanks to all those who have gone out of their way to do that little extra service or good deed.

The Peninsula News Review wants to extend the same opportunity to say thank you to its readers.

Is there someone who has done you a good turn?

Has someone gone out of their way to help, and hasn't expected even a 'thank you'?

Has a group, organization, business or individual donated time, goods or services to your cause?

The Review recognizes that the need to show your appreciation is important. In fact, many readers have let us know that they need a place to say thanks.

So, if enough interest is shown for this column, we will offer it, called Beefs & Bouquets, to readers in coming weeks as a chance to express thanks — or to blow off a little steam.

Just tell us what that person or organization has done for you or your group.

Write the information down, along with your name, address and telephone number.

Submissions should be sent to The Peninsula News

Review at P.O. Box 2070, Sidney, B.C. V8L 3S5. Or fax it to us. Our fax number is 656-5526.

The truth is out there ...

The supernatural is the natural not yet understood
Elbert Hubbard

You're a rational person. You believe that one plus one equals two and that A and B are inexorably followed by C, but suppose ...

Suppose you were walking out in the bush one day, listening to the birds, feeling the sun on your face, the clean air in your lungs, the delicious absence of tire squeals, internal combustion engines, and the mindless drone of TVs and radios. You round a bend in the trail looking for a good spot to hunker down and eat lunch and ...

You see it.

A ... creature. As big as a bear — even bigger — and yet ... not a bear. It looks like a giant wino dressed in a bad fur coat.

Your ever-rational mind desperately (thumbs through every possibility.

Too big for a wolverine ... not some giant cat ...

It's standing on its hind legs, looking right back at you!

Gorilla escaped from some zoo?

Some friends pulling a prank?

It's swaying now, looking back at you out of two eyes like black anthracite under shaggy brows. Not threatening ... but not retreating either. You'd like to turn and run but it's been ages since you even dared to take a breath and anyway your legs have turned to marble.

Hallucination? Hang-over? Incipient mental breakdown?

Your eyes lock with the creature's for what seems like an eternity. It might be three minutes.

Then, in less time than it takes to blink, the vision vanishes. It is gone in a blur. Only the undulating brush betrays the fact that anything ever stood there.

Was it ever there? Are you going mad?

Never happened to me, I'm relieved to say, but Henry Franzoni says it did happen to him, up in the Olympia Mountain range of the state of Oregon, on August 1, 1993.

Henry remembers the date very well — because up until then, he thought Sasquatch stories were a bunch of hooley. From that day on, Henry has dedicated his life to finding out everything he can about what he knows he saw.

ARTHUR BLACK

Sasquatch. Bigfoot. Yeti. Abominable Snowman. A mystery by any other name.

Henry Franzoni is not some fuzzy-minded mystic. Nor is he a twentieth century Fruit Loop who leaps to uncritically embrace any loopy idea that pops up on the Internet — from Martians in the Oval Office to clandestine government Alien Autopsies in Roswell, New Mexico.

Henry Franzoni doesn't drink or do drugs. He is a U.S. Government fisheries scientist working out of Portland, Oregon.

He is also a First Nations American who was raised in the bush. He knows the difference between bears and ... what ever it was he saw.

He doesn't know much more than that, but he's working on it — in a most scientific way. Other Sasquatch 'hunters' mount documentary expeditions into the back country, hoping to film — or even shoot — a Sasquatch.

Henry Franzoni combs computer data bases. He's looking for Sasquatch references in native lore and language.

He's found scores of aboriginal place names right across North America that refer to Sasquatch-like creatures. He's documented the Sasquatch's place in aboriginal culture and learned that virtually every tribe has a name for these beings.

And he's the first to admit that so far, he can't prove a thing.

Scientifically.

But he's working on it. His obsession has cost him friendships. It's made him the subject of ridicule among more orthodox colleagues in the scientific community.

But Henry Franzoni is a stubborn man. He was stubborn in his belief that Bigfoot was B.S.

Right up until his moment in the bush on August 1, 1993.

Now he's just as stubborn in his belief that there is something we don't know about out there.

Because Henry Franzoni knows what he saw.

Memorial park aspect an essential component

Editor:

This letter is written to applaud the reports by Lee Torgelson and Judy Reinche regarding Sanscha Hall and the new community and cultural centre. I was at both the meetings and I agree wholeheartedly with their sentiments.

The war veterans who gave their lives to free Europe from Nazi occupation are not being tremendously honored, if Sanscha Hall is to be a memorial for them.

My family and I were living

LETTERS to the editor

In the Netherlands at the time the Canadians came to set us free, and we and many, many others are extremely grateful to them. I am honored to be a Canadian since 1956, but cannot help but compare life in Europe to that in Canada.

Besides the difference in numbers of the population, there is a tremendous cultural gap. Canada has to do a lot to catch up with raising its cultural standards — even here on the Peninsula.

It has been said, "Without culture a civilization dies." After being involved in the local community for the past eight years, I am appalled and amazed at the lack of support and recognition for those who are attempting to raise cultural standards.

The Peninsula Players have been putting on excellent, top-performing plays, the Peninsula Singers just gave an excellent performance, the Sidney Concert Series as well as the Saltwater Festival display a lot of talent, but they all have one thing in common: they need a proper facility to rehearse in and hold their performances.

Visual arts groups also need a home where they can hold workshops and have continuing displays. The Sanscha land is a location that has easy access for most people and is an ideal location for the future home of the community and cultural centre.

It is time to set aside personal differences and focus on a common goal that will unite both the Sidney and North Saanich communities, to honor those who gave their lives to preserve Canada as a free country, in which the quality of life can be enriched through the arts for generations to come.

Bevan Pier proposal poses some concerns

Editor:

(Re: Fishing Pier on Bevan Avenue)

Are readers aware of the Town of Sidney's proposal to turn the Bevan Avenue fishing pier into a commercial enterprise and to extend it northward to join the Beacon dock, if not this year then next year?

Many individuals remembered loved ones by donations to help build the present pier. Service clubs and businesses donated.

Are all these people to receive refunds if the commercialization of the pier is allowed? Sixteen elementary, middle and secondary schools made donations. Who will explain to the students?

Does the town plan to demolish its recently completed concrete amphitheatre and steps down to the beaches between the two piers? It might as well, for beach access by boat would disappear and so would the view eastward to Sidney Spit and other islands.

Has the town realized that the commercial enterprises envisioned by them could only be seasonal? Few patrons, if any, would be brave enough to park at least a block away and walk out facing S.E. or N.E. winds and rain.

This is a serious matter for the future of the Sidney downtown waterfront. I urge those who donated time and/or money to the fishing pier to register their concerns. Contact the Mayor and Council of Sidney as well as Bill Hubbard, Ministry of Environment, Lands & Parks at 2080 - A Labieux Rd., Nanaimo, B.C. V9T 6J9 to voice your concerns.

Kids deserve better TV programming

Editor:

As Grade 6 middle school teachers, we would like to share our perspective on an animated TV program called "South Park."

The show airs on Channel 13 on Thursdays (10:30 p.m.) and Fridays at midnight.

Teachers are aware of the diverse opinions and viewpoints that are held within any community. As professionals, we need to be able to accommodate and respond to this diversity. We therefore tread carefully when expressing our personal opinions regarding television viewing choices.

Teachers' energies are devoted to providing a positive, safe and productive learning environment for our students. After viewing "South Park" and seeing its inappropriate themes slowly but steadily finding their way into the mainstream culture of our classrooms, we feel the need to address this issue.

A child's ability to think critically is just beginning to emerge during the middle years, as well as his or her sense of self and their relationship to the world.

The messages from this show undermine the effectiveness of our efforts to help students at this impressionable age develop a sense of social and personal responsibility. Even though this program is on relatively late at night, it is still accessible for their viewing. Our purpose for this letter is simply to make you aware, if you are not already, of the nature of this program and its lack of suitability for this age group. Our children are precious and deserve the best.

North Saanich council considerate of tax $

Editor:

I was appalled at the level of editorial comment in the Peninsula News Review "Of Running in Circles Around the Council Table June (10, 1998).

MORE LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Not only were there no coherent opinions or arguments put forward, the vitriolic comments that were levelled at North Saanich Mayor Michaluk and members of council were unnecessary, inappropriate, and uninformed.

Linda Michaluk and other members of council were elected in North Saanich to provide carefully considered decisions based on facts and not to respond to the emotional and insulting attacks by journalists who fail to understand that spending public money is a serious responsibility.

As a North Saanich voter, I am tired of your continuous attacks on our Mayor and council.

The Peninsula News Review should remember that it serves the whole Peninsula and, since it is now our only local paper, has a responsibility to present more balanced reporting.

Time for leadership on Sanscha Hall

Editor:

As a resident of North Saanich, I think having an indecisive, talk-it-to-death council generally serves the municipality not too badly. In a reverse sort of way, it serves to preserve the status quo, which is just fine with me. Who needs more growth and development?

But when the time does come for real leadership and decisiveness, it creates a problem.

It seems clear to me that the northern Peninsula needs a first-class community/cultural centre that reflects the status and pride of both municipalities and the taxpayers should be willing to pay for it.

Enough whining to senior governments for money. We owe it to ourselves.

This requires a positive attitude, real co-operation with the town of Sidney, a clear set of alternatives, and a referendum. Let's get on with it.

Masons work for the whole community

Editor:

As the wife of a mason, I am appalled by [Arthur] Black's article of June 10.

It is very much in error, and stupid to the nth degree.

It sounds like sour grapes. The Masons do a lot of work for people such children's hospitals, cars for cancer, burn units, seniors homes, etc.

I was under the impression an editor would review an article before printing. I know you've failed this time.

Standing up for Timor

Editor:

When one hears the date Dec. 7th, a day that will live in infamy, most Canadians think of the 1941 Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor.

I ask you to think of Dec. 7, 1975, the day Indonesia invaded each Timor and began its brutal occupation. Tens of thousands of East Timorese people were slaughtered in what has been called the worst case of genocide, per capita, since the holocaust.

In the years since the start of the occupation, thousands more have been massacred and tortured.

The Canadian government has, and continues to, condone and contribute to this genocide. We as citizens of Canada must demand an end to Canadian economic, military and diplomatic support for Indonesia's occupation of East Timor.

FAR and AWAY

This week, The Review profiles two members of the 443 Maritime Helicopter Squadron stationed at Patricia Bay who have just left for the Arabian Gulf, where they will assist an American battalion of battle ships enforce United Nations sanctions against Iraq.

The battalion will be gone for approximately six months. During that time, Major Stephen Allan and Cpl. Howard Honka will e-mail The Review to share their thoughts, feelings and experiences on the deployment efforts, as will their families left here at home on the Peninsula. Through these profiles, Allan and Honka hope to enlighten civilians about the unique lifestyles they lead.

By Lee Torgelson

Peninsula News Review

For many couples and families, saying goodbye is just part of the morning routine, as is greeting each other at the end of the day.

But for North Saanich residents Stephen Allan and Howard Honka, saying goodbye is far from routine — it's damn difficult.

Allan, 36, is a Major with the Patricia Bay 443 Maritime Helicopter Squadron based in North Saanich. Honka, 28, is a corporal.

They are two of approximately 20 members of 443 Squadron aboard HMCS Otawa and on their way to the Arabian Gulf as part of the U.S. Navy's Abraham Lincoln battle group on UN embargo duties.

While Allan and his family — wife Dorothy-Ann and children Kirsten, 10, and Kerri-Ann, 6 — have had the last 12 years to become accustomed to the lifestyle of the military family, this is the first lengthy separation for Honka and his common-law wife, Heather, 27.

"It's overwhelming. My first reaction was 'Six months! Oh, my God, what am I going to do for six months?'" Heather said Sunday, just two days before Howard's June 16 departure.

Framed in a strikingly pretty face, her large blue eyes look frightened and confused — mirrors for the emotions she's feeling.

"It's just too difficult to fathom," she said, reaching over to clasp Howard's hand in hers, a tender smile shared between them.

Howard has left numerous times to go on training courses since joining the air force eight years ago, but this is the first time in their four-year relationship that weeks will go by without being able to talk to each other, said Heather.

"At least when he was on course there were telephones available to call home and we talked all the time. Now, there will be one stretch where we'll be unable to communicate for about 17 days, and after that it will be subject to their schedule."

Sitting with Heather on the sofa, one of their two cats lying contentedly on his lap, Howard admits to conflicting emotions of his own. On the one hand, he joined the military so he could see the world. But seeing the world means not seeing Heather, and that's difficult to comprehend, he said.

"It's difficult for people in the military to think of not sharing the little moments of daily life with someone at home," said Howard. "People who aren't in the military can't begin to imagine it."

As luck would have it, two of Heather's three jobs will finish at the end of June, so she's going to have more time on her hands than she would like.

Regardless, the young couple says they feel up to the challenge and, although they aren't looking forward to the long separation, are already anticipating the trip's mid-way point, when Howard may have the chance to fly home for a brief visit.

"At least that will break up the separation a little bit," he said.

But that separation is something the Allan family has grown accustomed to.

Stephen and Dorothy-Ann met while he was in training 12 years ago, and in that time have learned to not only endure long separations, but ensure the transition from togetherness to being apart is as smooth as possible.

The delicate features of a Dresden doll belie the inner strength Dorothy-Ann has come to rely on.

And she's the first to admit that strength is a quality that was never tested before having to share a military life.

"I'm a lot more independent than I ever thought. I've really come to enjoy the life; travelling and living in new places," she said while sitting with the family around the kitchen table.

Because Stephen was already in the military when the children were born, they've grown up not knowing any other life. It makes adjusting to departures and arrivals much easier, said Dorothy-Ann.

"The kids are familiar with it. It's all they know." But that doesn't mean it's easy.

For a day or two after their dad's departure the girls are a little more emotional than usual, and the first weekend apart is "painful," said Dorothy-Ann.

"Time seems to crawl by, it goes so slow."

For Stephen, perhaps one of the most difficult parts of being away is missing the milestones of family life — school activities such as Christmas concerts and family Thanksgiving celebrations — things many other people take for granted.

"We take lots of videos. Lots and lots of videos," he said with a laugh, adding "it helps, but it's not the same."

Stephen has learned how to keep himself busy while he's away — whether he's working or not.

"A lot of guys are taking university courses with them. Me, I'm going to take French," he said.

And he's also taking along a keyboard he's been meaning to learn to play.

"Once we get into a routine on board, it makes the time go faster," he added.

The family will be able to communicate through e-mail, and while it may not seem like much during a six-month separation, it's something.

For the Allan family and Howard and Heather, it's not the time away that's important, it's the time they have together that is.

PIONEER PORTRAITS

GEORGE THOMAS

Christmas is a highlight for pioneers

By Brad Morrison

Annual fairs, ploughing matches, school parties and summer picnics were some of the events that brought the early pioneer settlers of the Saanich Peninsula together for entertainment. But it was the Christmas and New Year's parties which seemed to be remembered best.

In South Saanich, a New Year's day bash was normally held at William Thomson's Bannockburn Farm. But one week previous, the grand Christmas party, put on at George Thomas and his wife's place, should not be forgotten.

George Thomas was born on July 12, 1833 in the county of Surrey, England. Receiving some training as a carpenter, he was hired by the Hudson's Bay Company on a five-year contract, and left with a small cash advance for Fort Victoria aboard the Barque Tory, in November 1849.

Arriving at Esquimalt on May 14, 1850, he was conducted to the Establishment, where he performed his duties. Although there is little record of what those were, he is known to have worked on the Fort Victoria farm during 1850 and 1851. He apparently was transferred to the Puget Sound Agricultural Company's farm in 1852, where he completed his contract.

According to his family, he acted as an assistant carpenter during his term with the HBC. After his contract had expired, he did a variety of things, "including acting as a guard on the stage between Esquimalt and Fort Victoria" for several years. Later he is said to have worked for Edward E. Langford on the Colwood farm, which is now part of the Colwood Golf Course.

Doctor John Sebastian Helmcken, in his Reminiscences, written in 1896: "The Governor [James Douglas] had a gardener, an old Englishman named Thomas, a pretty rough sort of gardener, but knew more in his own opinion than anyone else, but the Company's men from Kent were decent gardeners too and 'Tom' Flewin had charge of the company [garden] which extended from Government to Douglas, bounded by Fort and Broughton Street. Thomas said the best of all flowers was the cauliflower! Anyhow Governor Douglas' garden was laid out by the aforesaid Thomas — and remains very much the same to this day."

In 1863, George Thomas was married to Elizabeth Ellen Bloom Watson by Rev. Charles Thomas Woods at the St. John's Iron Church in Victoria.

Miss Watson was born on Sept. 22, 1825, at Hitchin, Hereford, England, and came to Vancouver Island in 1861 with Rev. Woods' wife. It seems Mrs. Woods was traveling alone with a small baby and Miss Watson accompanied her to help care for the child, "promising her mother she would return in five years."

She never did return, but married the man with whom she fell in love.

After their marriage, the couple moved out to North Saanich, near Deep Cove, on a farm apparently owned by Bishop Hills, on the south side of the Downey farm. [Later it became part of the Downey farm.] There, George worked as a laborer for the next five years. He and Elizabeth soon had two young daughters, Fanny Rosa Selsie, born on Jan. 11, 1864, and Sarah Elizabeth Agnes, born on Oct. 6, 1867.

Devoted Anglicans, they had to travel to the nearest church, St. Stephen's to attend Sunday services.

"The family went this distance about eight miles, in a wagon," wrote an anonymous writer. "One Sunday, coming around Mt. Newton, they found one of the bridges burnt out. They would not give up going to church, so they unhitched the horses, Mr. Thomas rode one horse with the baby in his arms and led the other horse with the eldest girl on it. Mrs. Thomas walked, so in this way they continued the journey to church."

By 1869, Thomas moved to South Saanich, to another farm which is now part of Butchart Gardens. There he and partner David Long leased the land from William John Macdonald. Little is known of Mr. Long, outside of his farming in the Saanich District until about 1875. There is also little information about their eventual farming business, called Thomas and Long.

On Sept. 27, 1871, Macdonald sold the 45-acre farm [Section 15 Range 2 West] to Thomas for the bargain price of $50. Why the price was so low is not recorded. Mrs. Thomas assisted her husband to clear the land and tend the crops. One of their crops was hops, and at harvest time "all the neighbors for miles around came to help. The day was always finished with a big supper and [a] dance in the evening."

The family's community spirit was recognized in their day. Mr. Thomas donated three acres of land, and with the assistance of the neighboring families, a house was built with one room dedicated as a classroom. Each family would pay a small amount each month, which would pay the expenses of running the school.

Mrs. Fanny Butler acted as the teacher and the school only ran in this manner for a short period of time. [After the Saanich School was built, the classroom was still used by Mrs. Butler as a private school for young girls.]

On July 23, 1972, George Wilson was hired as the teacher for the South Saanich District, and children of school age were required to attend, on the land donated by William Turgoose.

George Thomas was elected as one of the school trustees, but only remained on the board for a single term. He was apparently unsatisfied with the location of the school. On April 6, 1877 he signed a petition for the building of a school on West Road, because of the large number of school-aged children in the area. He was among 12 other parents, and he declared he had two children who had to travel five miles to the school on East Saanich Road.

As for Christmas, Mrs. Lugin wrote this description of the gathering, as it was related to her:

"Before 8 o'clock on Christmas Eve they began to arrive, coming in big lumber wagons, 10 to 20 in a load, their merry voices and gay laughter announcing them long before they hove in sight from among the trees. The women came in bonnets and dolmans, their hair in pyramids of curls; full-flounced frocks, with high stays and tight basques; bright ribbons in their hair and tied around their arms, as was the prevailing fashion.

The Thomas homestead lit up Christmas Eve with lights, music and great food to celebrate the season.

"The men wore as gay attire as was consistent with their idea of masculine dignity. Young mothers brought their babies to be snuggled away from the noise in the big beds in the rooms upstairs, and the older children were permitted to sit up until they fell asleep ...

"And then the dinner! We don't know how all that assembly could possibly sit down at one table. Perhaps they had a meal in relays, grown-ups first. We forgot to ask about that. But it was a bountiful repast. Turkeys and plum puddings, Christmas cakes and other holiday cheer, all provided by the generous host and hostess; all prepared by Mrs. Thomas and her daughters. It must have taken several turkeys to feed that crowd of hungry, healthy country people. But there was always more than enough.

"After the feast was over the rooms were cleared for dancing. The Gregg [sic] boys tuned up their fiddles and the opening quadrille began ... It was broad daylight and Christmas morning when at length the dancers' feet were weary and the fiddlers' fingers refused any longer to press the strings or wield the bow ..."

On Dec. 12, 1886, George and Elizabeth decided to sell their home and farm to Joseph Wriglesworth of the San Juan Island Lime Manufactures. Moving to North Saanich, they built a house on the land of their daughter, Fanny, and her husband, John Thomas Harrison.

On Jan. 16, 1910, George Thomas died, and was interred at Holy Trinity Churchyard.

Elizabeth joined her husband on July 11, 1916.

Pen Track athletes rack up plenty of PBs at Dogwood

Peninsula Track athletes took full advantage of excellent conditions at the Victoria Dogwood Meet June 6 and 7, setting 80 new personal best performances and bringing home a staggering 66 medals and ribbons.

The most outstanding result was achieved by 17-year-old Greg Dingle. Unable to compete in the previous weekend's BC High School Championships because of a slight hamstring pull, Dingle came back with a vengeance to set a new personal standard in the high jump of 2.02 metres (6'7.5"), six centimetres better than his previous best and a new record for the Dogwood Meet.

Another meet record was set by Shannon Marshall, 16, with her 4.98-metre winning leap in the long jump. Marshall also took the 100M hurdles in 17.26 seconds.

Others who made major improvements in their events included Alicia Green, 14, who cut 47 seconds from her 3,000M time with a third-place finish at 12:08.2, 30 seconds in taking second in the 1,500M race walk at 10:07.9, and 29 seconds off for second in the 1,500M at 5:28.53.

Green was also first in the 1,500M steeplechase with a PB of 6:29.9. Her sister Sarah, 11, chipped in by chopping 16 seconds from her 1,500M time at 5:56.02, while Bryan Perrin, 14, ran his 3,000M a full 39 seconds faster to take second place at 12:04.8. Perrin also took third in the 1,500M at 5:39.3.

Tyler Cocker garnered his usual share of the loot, with gold-medal performances in the 1,500M steeplechase with a dazzling personal best of 5:09.0, a long jump PB of 4.95 metres and victories in the 100M hurdles (15.69) and the javelin (30.87 metres). Cocker also added a silver in the 800M (2:11.74, PB) and bronzes in the 300M hurdles (44.83, PB) and pole vault (2.90 metres).

Blake Strukoff, 12, continued to shine with wins in his two favorite events, the 80M hurdles and 200M hurdles (13:42 and 30:97, PBs), plus a silver finish in the 100M with a PB of 13.64, another silver in the 200M at 29.43 and a bronze in shot putt at 7.47 metres.

Lindy Payne, 16, maintained her dominance in the javelin with a golden 35.02-metre throw, while Julie Foster, also 16, set a third-place 4kg shot PB of 7.48 metres.

Other medallists included Fraser Hayes, 11, with bronzes in the long jump, discus, and javelin; Matt Lott, 11, finished with a silver in the javelin; Ben Lott, 12, finished with a silver in the 400M; Shaun Foster, 12, garnered silver in the shot putt; and Ashley McMaster, 11, nailed a bronze finish in the 400M.

Piranhas swim to medals at Esquimalt meet

The Peninsula's Panorama Piranha Swim Club capped off another successful weekend of swimming at Commonwealth Place at the Esquimalt Invitational meet June 6 and 7.

The club sent 52 participants who returned with 119 personal best times (PBTs).

A total of 15 swimmers garnered four PBTs each, earning them the coveted Prime Piranha club towel.

Club member Allison Lockhart swam seven PBTs. Other division highlights included: Valerie Webb, Div. 4, first place in four events; Cori Hanan, Div. 7, winner of all her events; Emilie Veillacott, Div. 1, first place in the 50M fly; Ali van Stolk, Div. 4, set a new meet record in the 100M backstroke.

On June 13, the Cowichan Valley Breakers hosted the 'B' and 'C' Invitational Meet in Duncan, which included timed finals in four strokes and the 200M medley relay.

Highlights of that meet include:

Camelita Sampson, first, 100M back, first, 50M free and PBT in both; Zoe Baillie, PBT by 10 seconds; Lise Malta, fifth in both 50M free and 50M back; Maggie Williams, PBT to capture first in 50M breast; Vanessa Pettinger, third in 50M breast; Kate Pettinger, second in 50M free and 50M fly; Kaetlynd McRae, first in 50M fly; Nico Murray PBT by knocking off four seconds in 50M free.

The medley relay teams were all strong finishers in their divisions:

Div. 1, second; Div. 3, second and fourth; Div. 4, sixth; Div. 5, first.

Measuring his music by the revs

By Leo Torgelson

Peninsula News Review

The squealing of tires and the whine of an engine as RPMs are maxed out are music to the ears of North Saanich resident Rocky Collins.

For the past 24 years, Collins has found that music on various race tracks, as he pitted his experience against that of other race car drivers.

Although he has raced in various classes over the years, Collins now sits behind the wheel of a 1998 Monte Carlo super stock owned by Butch Behns and Gord Alberg — a division most race fans can identify with due to the similarity to the Winston Cup and drivers like Dale Earnhart and Richard Petty.

"Fans really seem to identify with the super stocks. They're easy to relate to because that's the most common class of racing shown on television," Collins, 42, told The Review in a recent interview.

Collins comes by his love of racing honestly. He grew up in Sidney watching his father prepare for his own racing events.

It was never something his parents wanted him to participate in, but when he came home at 17 with a race car of his own, they chose to support him.

"I brought the car home and my dad noticed the brakes needed work. It was either get the brakes fixed, or I was driving it the way it was," Collins said.

"They've been very supportive ever since and show up at almost every race."

And quite often when they show up, it's to see their son take the checkered flag as he crosses the finish ahead of the pack.

Collins won the Race of Champions at Western Speedway in Langford in 1988, the IMCA modified championship in 1991 and 1992, a couple of 100-lap events in 1995 and the Canada 200 in 1996.

Over the years, he's had

Checking and re-checking is all part of the racing game plan. Without a machine that works the way you want it — when you want it — a driver could be in trouble.

"It doesn't matter how good the driver is. Without a great crew behind you, you can't have a great car."

Rocky Collins

the pleasure of racing the Nascar circuit and, at one point in the early 1980s, crewed for Nascar regular Dave Marcus.

Having been on the working end of a wrench for other drivers has given Collins great appreciation for his own crew.

"It doesn't matter how good the driver is. Without a great crew behind you, you can't have a great car," he said.

Crew Chief Craig Douglas makes sure the team of Paul Boukauer, Brian Brittnall, Tony VanWick, Daryl Rendings, Don McHardie, Eric Egland and Ian Carlow are as well-oiled and smooth running as the car itself.

And like any sport, sponsors are the key to enabling a race crew to ensure the car lacks for nothing — like the $20,000 motor Collins is expecting to arrive any day.

"It's an expensive hobby. Lots of guys can't race as often as they like because they can't get good sponsors. Good sponsors are hard to come by," Collins said.

And Collins figures he's got some of the best. Due to the generosity of Thrifty Foods, Stash Tea, Cof-Lib, Bertolli Olive Oil, Save Kids-Canada and smaller sponsors like United Engineering, Bowcott Trucking, Alpha Auto Body, Beacon Auto Parts, SHC Auto Graphics and Sidney Transmission, Collins not only runs a top super stock, he'll soon have a 35-foot matching trailer to travel to various tracks with.

But, while Collins spends as many weekends as possible at the track, he has other interests as well.

Like attending his children's various sporting activities.

"I don't race every weekend. I do have a life," he quipped.

And whether he's racing at Western Speedway, Yakima, Skagit, Cassidy, Portland, Saratoga, Port Angeles, Monroe, Tenino or Shasta, California, it's a part of his life he's not going to give up soon.

"I'll probably still be racing after I'm retired."

Don't get burned when barbecuing

Most manufacturers state on their labels what the clearances from combustible construction should be. Most state, "do not locate this outdoor cooking gas appliance under overhead unprotected combustible surfaces."

Because most balconies are protected from the weather by an overhang or a balcony above, this creates an overhead surface that could become involved during a barbecue fire.

Learn now what you can do to ensure the safety of yourself and others when using propane! The following safety information will assist you in this regard. However, should you encounter any questions requiring more information in this message, on propane cylinders or any other components of your propane fuel system including the regulators, piping and connectors and the appliances, consult a propane dealer or service organization.

When cylinder is in transit

- Remember to keep cylinder upright, and well ventilated when in transit.
- Keep valve closed, and insert the POL plug even when EMPTY. Keep cylinder away from flame or heat.
- Put the cylinder down gently. Cylinders bruise easily.

When cylinder is in use

- Cylinder must be upright on a firm base, away from flame or heat.

- Use only with appliances approved for propane.
- (NOTE: When connecting note that cylinder valve has a left hand thread).

- After connection, check for leaks with soapy water or a leak detector - NEVER NEVER USE MATCHES OR OPEN FLAME TO TEST FOR LEAKS.

- Cylinder valve must be fully opened to operate.
- Do not let the cylinder get too hot; the inside pressure will rise.
- Always use a pressure reducing regulator.

When cylinder is not in use

- Close cylinder valve tightly, even when empty.
- Protect the cylinder valve. If it is broken through misuse, it will leak out in a hurry and could cause problems.
- Store cylinder outdoors in a well-ventilated area, in a secure and upright position away from flame or heat.
- Be sure cylinder valve is closed and a POL plug (left hand thread) should be tightened into the valve.

Editor's Note: This Fire Prevention column, sponsored by Sidney Fire Equipment, and provided by the Saanich Peninsula's three fire prevention officers, is presented in The Review on the third Wednesday of each month. For more information on fire safety, contact your municipal hall.

We Like Nosey Neighbors.

If your neighbor's dog is left outside with no shelter, food or water...

If you see a group of kids kicking a cat...

Even if you just suspect an animal may be suffering from abuse or neglect...

We want to know.

Unlike most crime victims, animals can't seek help themselves. They depend on YOU to stop their suffering. And if you don't call us, who will?

We understand that you respect your neighbor's right to privacy and may not want to see his pet taken away. That's why, after you call us, we'll first try to educate your neighbor about how to comply with local animal-care laws. We also realize that when you witness cruelty, you may be afraid to "get involved." That's why we'll keep your report confidential.

All you have to do is pick up your phone and call us. We'll do the rest.

Containers add variety to the garden

Several things have happened this week that may interest you — especially those of you who live in apartments or condos with a sunny, or even semi-sunny balcony.

I was given a neat growing box that definitely won't leak and pour unwanted water on the deck below — putting out their barbecue just as they put on the hamburgers!

This box is about three feet long and 18 inches wide, and is built in such a way that it is self-watering.

If you are going away for a couple of weeks your plants will be quite happy without you there holding a brimming watering can. It is called a "Maxi-cap Self Watering Plant Box," and is available at Gardenwares Supplies on Bay Street in Victoria.

Mr. Park of Gardenwares also provided the soil and fertilizer to make the set complete, and it is already planted with one tomato and two cantaloupes.

It seems a wonderful idea for those of you who would still like to do some gardening, even if you live five floors up! Call 388-5008 for further information.

A caller this evening is having trouble with raccoons climbing his plum tree.

Of course the plums aren't ripe yet, but those clever creatures are already checking to see if the fruit is edible.

He wondered if there is a solution, (other than a shotgun).

Actually, I've seen fruit trees whose trunks are wrapped in a tube of galvanized tin, which, of course raccoons can't climb. If your trees have low branches the 'coons will just jump up into the tree, so you'd have to remove the lowest branches to prevent that happening.

HELEN LANG
Over the Garden Fence

Carolynn K. has provided me with the name of the longest-lasting, stored garlic. It is called "California White Silverskin." If you want to plant a potent garlic this fall, I'll give you Carolynn's number and you can order some from her.

Bobby McC. called to ask about pruning a camellia which bears its beautiful soft pink flowers much too close to the ground. Her shrub is spreading OUT, rather than growing UP.

I'd attempt a long-term approach to this pruning business, first by removing those branches nearest the ground, and pinching back about half the new growth on side branches while leaving the branches growing upward unpruned.

Bobby has a nice sense of humor. She said, "I thought that's what I should do. I guess I just wanted your permission!" Let's hope I'm right!

She also asked me about a hydrangea which was pruned right to the ground three years ago and hasn't bloomed since. She says there isn't a sign of a flower bud this year, either. Many years ago, we had a terrible winter and the hydrangea in my parents' garden was killed right to soil level.

The gardener wanted to dig out the roots, but because my Mother had just died (she had loved that hydrangea) I begged him not to remove it. Nothing happened until late June of that year, but suddenly new growth appeared. Within two or three years, it regained its former beauty.

So, with several applications of super phosphate over the root area of this flower-less hydrangea, I wouldn't be surprised to see buds appear — maybe not this year, but almost certainly next!

Ken, who called last week about his peony buds which refused to open, called today to say that spraying with water hadn't helped. But when he brought the buds into the house and put them in water they immediately burst open.

This should tell us something, but what?

Does it mean they weren't warm enough outside? Does it mean they needed more water? The peony buds still outside remain tightly shut.

He will divide his plants this fall, as they appear to be overcrowded, but in the meantime he is going to attend the plant clinic held the second Thursday of each month at 6:30 p.m. at Sidney Silver Threads (10030 Resthaven Dr.).

Helen Lang would be glad to answer your questions on gardening. Call 656-5918.

An 88-year-old

The first Father's day was celebrated June 19, 1910. The idea to set aside a day for a father was first suggested by a woman from Spokane, Washington.

One Sunday in 1909, Sonora Smart Dodd was sitting in church listening to a sermon about the love of a father because she had been raised by her father, Henry Jackson Smart after her mother died. She decided she wanted to show her father how special he was to her. It's her father's day.

Sonora's father was born in June, so she chose to hold the first Father's Day on June 19, 1910. In 1924, President Calvin Coolidge proclaimed the third Sunday in June as Father's Day. It was to be worn for a living father and white if the father has died.

In 1926, a National Father's Day Committee was formed in New York City.

In 1956, Father's Day was recognized by a Joint Resolution of Congress.

In 1966, President Lyndon Johnson signed a presidential proclamation designating Father's Day as a national holiday.

In 1972, President Richard Nixon established a permanent national observance of Father's Day.

ON 'YER BIKE ...

Cycle to work becomes Dr.'s sore point

A recent promotion to get our city to cycle to work for a week sent me scurrying to the little cycle shop of horrors in search of "something for the outta shape, Advil pumpin', born again cyclist" as the sales creature put it.

An hour later, and with enough new frequent flyer points on my VISA to fly my entire family first-class around the world three times, I emerged with a real skookum 21-speed "hybrid" bike for my wife, the ZIPPER RIPPER (the bike, not the wife).

Explained to me in terms I preferred not to visualize, the hybrid was the love child of a passionate affair between a squat Mountain Bike and a sleek 21-speed racing model with two large, luscious wheels.

Three months later, on my birthday, my wife responded with a similar insult and a hybrid for me, an exact "His" version of the ZIPPER RIPPER.

("His" meaning it has an evil bar to be straddled in the middle and endorsed by three out of four urological trauma surgeons).

I learned later that the bikes were third cousins, one spoke removed.

At the office, Judy the nurse encouraged me to ride to work as it was such a reverent, metaphysical time for her.

So challenged, the first nice day of summer I jumped out of bed and actually thought about riding the bike the 25 kilometres to work.

By mid-summer I had cleaned the bike, and as the season came to a close I finally mounted the beast.

And on the next day, I rode it.

By the time I figured out my official CSFH (chin strap from Hades) helmet, I was already two hours late for work. After 38 or so adjustments, I finally hooked the strap to my Adam's apple.

With one lobe plastered against my forehead and the other flapping maniacally in the breeze, I ripped my ZIPPER down the driveway and was off.

I now realize that I live in the hilliest region of the hilliest town in the hilliest province in the silliest country in the world.

I'd rocket down the spine of one slope in three seconds with great glee only to crawl up the other side for 30 minutes with my rock hammer and pick ax. After several hills, I was a babbling mass of manic depressive protoplasm.

I needed Lithium to smooth these hills out. Of course with so many grades I was able to try out all the gears — usually going from second to 17th in one shift and yanking the remaining fibres of my hamstring right off the bone.

The great safety of the CSFH helmet was a real reassurance.

While climbing a hill with my head down, the helmet would fall forward and dangle off my nose, but when screaming down the backside of the same hill, my helmet would fling over my bare head and lodge somewhere between my Dowager's hump and my tailbone, with the strap all but garroting me whenever I hit the slightest bump.

I'm sure our town leaders had in mind some strange notion of getting the voter into shape and did not issue the "Cycle to Work" week as a competition.

This, however, goes against the grain of the XY chromosome, much like lifting up two toilet seats at once.

The unwritten rules of the road include a well-known proviso that one male shall not pass another without a serious challenge.

I was put to such a test soon, as a Nuke swam on wheels zipped by me, instantly inducing the chase reflex.

(This reflex is not just the domain of Rottweilers and Dobermans, but is also inherent of any self-respecting XY cyclist.)

It is a genetically determined reflex found on the otherwise relatively bare Y chromosome right next to the TV remote control gene.

But never mind that, I was just passed by a 78-speed, $45,000 Mach 3, complete with driver's side airbag and Mars Pathfinder pedals.

Worst of all, the other XY (likely an xy) in Spandex. Most men I associate with don't wear Spandex. Actually they couldn't wear Spandex, it ain't on the chromosome.

I note his tachometer, photo radar detector and exhaust pipe. Not a good sign.

Instantly, however, I find myself in hot pursuit of this ... steroid pumped (huff), Libyan terrorist ... ax murdering (puff) ... salmon fishin' ... spawn of Satan (grunt) ... ND-Politician.

As he becomes a dot on the horizon, I reassure myself that if I were his age, with his bike, with his squads, his parents, and his Spandex, I'd clean his clock.

But up ahead around the corner, to my delight, is another, obviously slower, cyclist also cursing the puff of smoke that cruised by him. Pedalling like mad ... bang. I blow his doors off, ringing my Buzz Lightyear bell victoriously.

Even if he is in his late 70s, hey, it feels good and I can't help but peer back at him to gloat — and make sure he isn't gaining on me.

I finally pull into work seven hours late, wipe the bugs off my teeth, smooth my tattered right pant leg that had become intimate with the chain with every gust of wind, and note the three pounds of grease likely stuck permanently under my nails from putting the chain back on.

As I eased my keyster gingerly off the seat, however, sudden indescribable panic struck, as I discovered — to my absolute horror — that I had no feeling in my, well ... um ... where Judy wouldn't have the same problem.

I was a eunuch!

I rushed into the men's room and was somewhat reassured that I hadn't derailed all my gears, but I certainly felt like I should undergo some physiotherapy, surgery or vacuum extraction or something.

A male co-worker assured me that all sensation would come back from CINN (Cycle Induced Numb Nevermind) syndrome. He explained that this is why male cyclists, after being seen occasionally going to the standing position with a slight wiggle, whilst clearing their throats in a deep, guttural reassurance.

I am pleased to say that all feeling came back, as did my voice.

And just in time for me to call my wife to come and pick me up.

CLOSE ENCOUNTERS OF ALL KINDS

Odd names and sights along the open road

Our driving trip from Ottawa back to Sidney took a different route and a different pace from that of the east-bound leg.

We wanted to visit friends in various places along the way, and to stop in to Yellowstone Park.

While the run east had been accomplished in six days, the return would take 10.

By this time our map was more Scotch tape than paper, but we learned we would have to pass very close to both Mount Rushmore, with its four massive faces hewn from the rock, and to the Devil's Tower.

This latter was the setting for the film Close Encounters of the Third Kind. We visited both.

We also took time to go in to Wall, the tiny town in South Dakota with the drug store, a complex actually, advertised on signs all over the world.

The drive was in easier stages, and was largely uneventful in itself with one notable exception. Up in Rogers Pass we came within fewer than three meters of hitting a moose, which fortunately ran parallel to our car before cutting across just behind us.

About 50 metres back of us was a motorcycle traveling at highway speed. The moose passed between us, and the motorcycle made a somewhat wobbly exit at the next pull off.

I suspect the driver needed to change his shorts. Some general observations on a trip like this. I am always saddened by the carnage on our highways.

It seems you can't travel more than a few kilometres without seeing an animal that has had the misfortune of getting too close to a car. The animals always lose but so do we.

BRAD FRANKLIN
Old is Older Than Me

through Dumb.

In Montana there's a community called Rudyard with a large sign advising a population of "596 nice people and one old sore head."

I suspect they take turns playing that part for the tourists.

Then, of course, there are the towns named for foreign cities, Moscow and Athens among them.

Although we have only lived in the west for little more than a year, when we arrived in the mountains and knew the ocean was just the other side we felt as though we were getting home.

We used to live in Ottawa. It's a pretty city, a nice place, but it just isn't as interesting or exciting as

"In Montana there's a community called Rudyard with a large sign advising a population of '596 nice people and one old sore head'."

Franklin

In the east there are relatively more small victims; porcupines, skunks and raccoons mostly, while out here we kill fewer but larger animals, primarily deer.

I'm intrigued by place names and speculate about their origin.

We drove through a town called Normal (wishful thinking, perhaps) and another called Dummer, although I don't recall passing what we have here.

It was a long drive, more than 10,000 kilometres for the round trip, and we got home tired, but somehow also refreshed.

Would we drive it again? In a heartbeat.

You just don't have that kind of experience on an aircraft. Another driving trip will have to wait, though. Our next destination of substance is Asia.

And for that one we'll fly.

Selling securities requires anticipation

One of the difficult, yet important aspects of investing is knowing when to sell a security. Unlike buying, when the expectation is that the stock price will go up by selling, you have to anticipate a decline in price, or admit to yourself that your reasons for buying are no longer valid.

While there are no hard and fast rules to indicate when the optimum time is to sell, there are some tell-tale signs.

Perhaps the most obvious reason, yet most difficult time to sell, is when the market is up not when the market is down. With the markets at near record heights this may be an opportune time to review your portfolio. To make money in the market you have to buy when the majority are selling and sell when the masses are buying.

It is rarely wise to sell simply because the price of a stock has declined. To some extent, the price of an individual stock is determined as much by market psychology as by the fundamentals of the company.

If the reasons that you bought the stock are still valid, hold on to it and ride out any downturn in the stock price.

Fundamentals, like the dividend track record and the price/earnings multiple, can provide a clue as to whether or not a stock is fairly valued. It is useful to compare the price of one stock against that of another in the same industry or business.

How does the price compare on a relative basis? Sell the most expensive relative to its peers.

Emotion has no place in investment decisions. To succeed as an investor, one has to be disciplined.

When doing research on whether or not to buy a stock a target price should be identified. As the stock nears that price, if there have not been any new developments to warrant a higher target, sell the stock.

Finally, if things start to go wrong, sell the stock. If you begin to doubt the integrity of management, if the stated outlook for the company just doesn't sound feasible, if the earnings consistently fail to materialize - sell the stock.

It is normally much better to sell too early than too late.

You Be The Judge

LIARS DON'T PROSPER

"Darling, why are you sitting at your desk in the middle of the night, head in your hands?" Eleanor swept into the living room dressed in her nightgown and put her hands on Ivan's shoulders.

Ivan covered her hands with his. "Eleanor, we are in a terrible mess. You know Mother left me most of her property?"

"Nothing to sneeze at $140,000?" Ivan looked dejected. "I just came across a later will which leaves most of the money to charity. We are doomed."

Eleanor was a fighter.

"Not at all. Come 9:00 a.m., I'm calling Daddy's old law firm. They'll handle it. Don't worry about a thing and come to bed."

That afternoon, the couple were sitting in front of Mr. Winston Jr., signing the contract hiring the firm's services.

"You understand what you're signing, Ivan? Because you say you're in dire straits, we agree that you will pay a percentage of your mother's estate to us if we are successful."

Should you decide to terminate our services, you consent to pay our hourly fee for all services rendered to that date."

Ivan signed with a flourish.

In the elevator, Eleanor gave Ivan an angry stare.

"Why did you lie to Mr. Winston, Ivan?"

Ivan pretended he didn't understand.

"You know full well what I mean, Ivan. You lied about being in dire straits."

Ivan looked defiant. "Frankly, I don't want to pay their hefty bills. I have a right to protect my income."

A year later, Ivan received a letter from the law firm.

"Winston and Winston have just learned that you lied about your income. We cannot represent someone who is not completely forthcoming with us. Please consider our services terminated. Enclosed is our statement for $20,000 for services rendered to date."

Ivan went out of control. "Our contract didn't say they could collect if they ended the relationship. They'll have to sue me."

The firm sued Ivan.

The firm presented the situation. "Your Honour, Ivan lied to us. He lied about his income. He could've been lying about other things too. We didn't feel comfortable representing him. But, Ivan benefited from our services. He can take that information, give it to another lawyer and speed up the process. Make him pay us for our hard work."

Ivan exclaimed, "Your Honour, I don't owe them anything. The firm was working on a percentage basis. I signed a contract, but it didn't say that I would have to pay if they dropped me. They dropped me. It wasn't my choice. I have every right to that information that they discovered. Don't make me pay what I don't owe."

Should Ivan have to pay the lawyer?

Moving down in the '90s... help for the buy or rent dilemma

OTTAWA - Home owners who want to give up large houses now have help deciding whether to buy another house or to rent, according to an article in the first quarter issue of Canadian Housing Markets (CHM), released today by Canada Mortgage and Housing Corporation (CMHC).

"A growing number of Canadians are leaving large homes, especially as their children move out," said Bruno Duhamel, of the Market Analysis Centre at CMHC. "Their decision to move into a smaller home always involves financial and emotional considerations. The Buy or Rent Decision Model can help them with the financial implications of moving."

According to Duhamel, the financial analysis described in the article shows that renting is often a favourable short-term option. Buying a house with low equity can also be a profitable strategy. However, for those considering paying cash for their new house, the model suggests it may be more advantageous to rent and to invest the proceeds from their house sale. All the analysis generated by the model depends on future rates of investment return, house prices and rent increases.

Another article in Canadian Housing Markets summarizes a new study from Industry Canada that identifies the leading causes of bankruptcy in 1997. Leading the list was a decline in income following a loss of employment. While most who cited this cause found new jobs, many were left with less income to pay debts.

The study dispels the belief that mortgage debt is a key factor contributing to bankruptcy. In addition, demographic data finds significantly more women and students declaring bankruptcy now than when a similar study was conducted 20 years ago.
